

Michael Fey - President & COO

Michael Fey is Blue Coat's president and chief operating officer. With a proven track record in operational and go-to-market strategies, Fey is focused on driving revenue growth and further extending the reach of Blue Coat in the market. Reporting to Blue Coat CEO Greg Clark, Fey is responsible for aligning the company's leading web security, encryption management, cloud offerings and advanced threat protection solutions with customer requirements. Additionally, he is responsible for field and customer-facing business operations.

Prior to joining Blue Coat, Fey was with the Intel Security Group serving as executive vice president, chief technology officer, and general manager of corporate products. In this role he drove the company's strategic vision and security innovation. Fey also managed business operations and strategy for corporate product business units at McAfee, part of Intel Security. Previously, Fey was senior vice president of advanced technologies and field engineering with McAfee where he oversaw key corporate acquisitions, and engagement with global customer executives and prospects to develop, build, and implement strategic security solutions.

An industry veteran, Fey has held leadership positions with Opsware, Mercury Interactive, and Lockheed-Martin. He graduated magna cum laude from Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University with a Bachelor of Science in engineering physics and a minor in mathematics.
