

Cellular Wireless Equipment

VITA provides Cellular equipment as part of the Wireless Services to its customers. A VITA customer organization is free to use its own equipment but may elect to acquire the equipment from the Contract Supplier as part of the service. The one-time cost of providing this equipment is recovered from the using Customer Organization as a one-time charge. VITA retains Title to the equipment for the duration of the Warranty period, which is typically one-year from date of purchase. Any equipment removed from service during this period must have data removed in accordance with Commonwealth Security Standard SEC514-04 and either repurposed within the organization or destroyed, as stated in the Security Standard.

Title to the equipment transfers to the using VITA Customer upon expiration of the Warranty. After warranty expiration and at end of life, the using organization is responsible for removal of data and disposal of the device, in accordance with the applicable State or Local Security Standards and Surplus Property regulations and policies.
