

CIO of the Commonwealth
Lem Stewart

From the CIO

As many of you know, the Commonwealth's IT Infrastructure Partnership with Northrop Grumman officially began on July 1. As we move forward with this exciting initiative, please remember that all IT products and services that state agencies use also are available to other governmental entities in the Commonwealth. Please don't hesitate to contact us for any IT need you may have - we hope to provide measurable value in all of our efforts. I look forward to seeing you at COVITS 2006 in Roanoke.

Convenience, cost savings of online registration services can easily be yours

Virginia.gov's event registration application makes it easy for government entities to offer online registration to their citizens - with no upfront cost and reduced development time. This registration application is easy to customize. It can be used for conferences, seminars, ticket sales, class registrations and more. A Web-based administrative interface allows each event to match a particular Web site. If fees are required for event registration, the service can accept payments from the user by electronic check or credit card through a secure site.

Benefits

- * Reliable and secure environment
- * Cost savings
- * Unlimited use
- * Easy to use administrative tools

What customers are saying:

"Virginia.gov's Event Registration Service proved to be a simple, quick and easy solution to our event registration needs. After Virginia.gov's initial set up for our institution, we were able to offer online registration and accept online payments for our democracy conference in just a few minutes."

Dave Hooper, Director of Web Communications, Longwood University

Who to contact for more information:

Deanna Boehm, (804) 786-4230; toll-free (877) 482-3468; dboehm@virginiainteractive.org

Don't miss COVITS 2006: Sept. 10-12, Roanoke - it's not too late to register!

The Commonwealth's Innovative Technology Symposium promises an exciting agenda, with a new focus on networking and practical solutions. Choose breakout sessions that align with your needs, hear from IT leaders at the state, local and federal level, and come away with many practical strategies to improve government service delivery via IT tools. See the complete agenda at www.covits.org and register today!

